

Daiziana Ortiz, age 16: “With the fire on high”

Would you like to know how it feels to be a teen mom in high school in the city of Philadelphia. Well “With the fire on high” is the perfect book to read.

It talks about Emoni struggles with having a child in her teenage years and not knowing if college would be a good fit due to having a child and wanting to be a cook and to show her Puerto rican heritage.

It’s just something about “with the fire on high” just speaks to me. Maybe it’s just because I am a teen in high school that lives in the city of Philadelphia.

I don’t have a child but I do know lots of people that are teen moms in high school and don’t know if college would work for them.

Like my mother she was a teen mom at 15 years old and didn’t know about what life was going to look like after high school, she didn’t get to go to college but she did get to graduate high school.

I love that the author Elizabeth Acevedo makes books like “with the fire on high” or the “poet x” because she talks about everyday situations. This book just proves to never judge because it can happen to you or someone you know.

So if anyone is thinking about reading “with the fire on high” i think you should read it especially if you like reading books that can really happen or know someone that happened to.

Even if you don’t want to go to college and still wanna do something you love, you can look at emoni, she is a senior in high school thinking about her life as a cook and trying to connect to her Puerto rican heritage.

I hope you can like “with the fire on high” as much as I did. And If you do like this book as much as I did feel free to email me.

I would enjoy talking to anyone about this book.
